SWISS GERMAN UNIVERSITY

This thesis is about media framing of a defamation case. It aims at finding out the media framing of two online media in Indonesia of a defamation case of a punk rock star against the Indonesian Medical Association (IDI). The framing analysis was conducted using the Robert N. Entman framing model. The analysis of this study from September 03, 2020, until October 27, 2020, found that the media framing by the two online media, namely detik.com and balipost.com, of the defamation case, showed some notable differences. Firstly, detik.com produced 30 articles about the case, while balipost.com 11 articles. Secondly, detik.com used the legal substance frame quite prominently in its articles of the case, while balipost.com opted to focus more on using the frame of peripheral aspects such as the street protests that accompanied the trials or the celebrity status of the defendant.

Keywords: media frames, framing, online media, defamation, Entman Anlysis

DEDICATION

I dedicate this research to my family and all the people who has supported me since the beginning and made my university life possible.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I want to say thank you to my parents for the unlimited support and motivation that they gave me throughout this process. Also, I would like to thank my friends who have been there for me and always encourage me in the process.

I would love to say thank you to my thesis advisor, which is Ms. Muninggar Sri Saraswati. The person who is always guiding me, never gave up on me, and gave me so many encouragements and motivation that have a big part in helping me to get to this point.

To all the lecturers from the Communication and Public Relations Department that I have met throughout my university life, thank you very much for all the knowledge and guidance you have shared in these amazing four years.

For all my classmates with who I have shared so many experiences in the class and the other fellow SGU students. Thank you so much for always facing and experiencing all the ups and downs that happened in this whole university life together. Thank you for always entertaining me whenever necessary and giving me an unforgettable memory.
